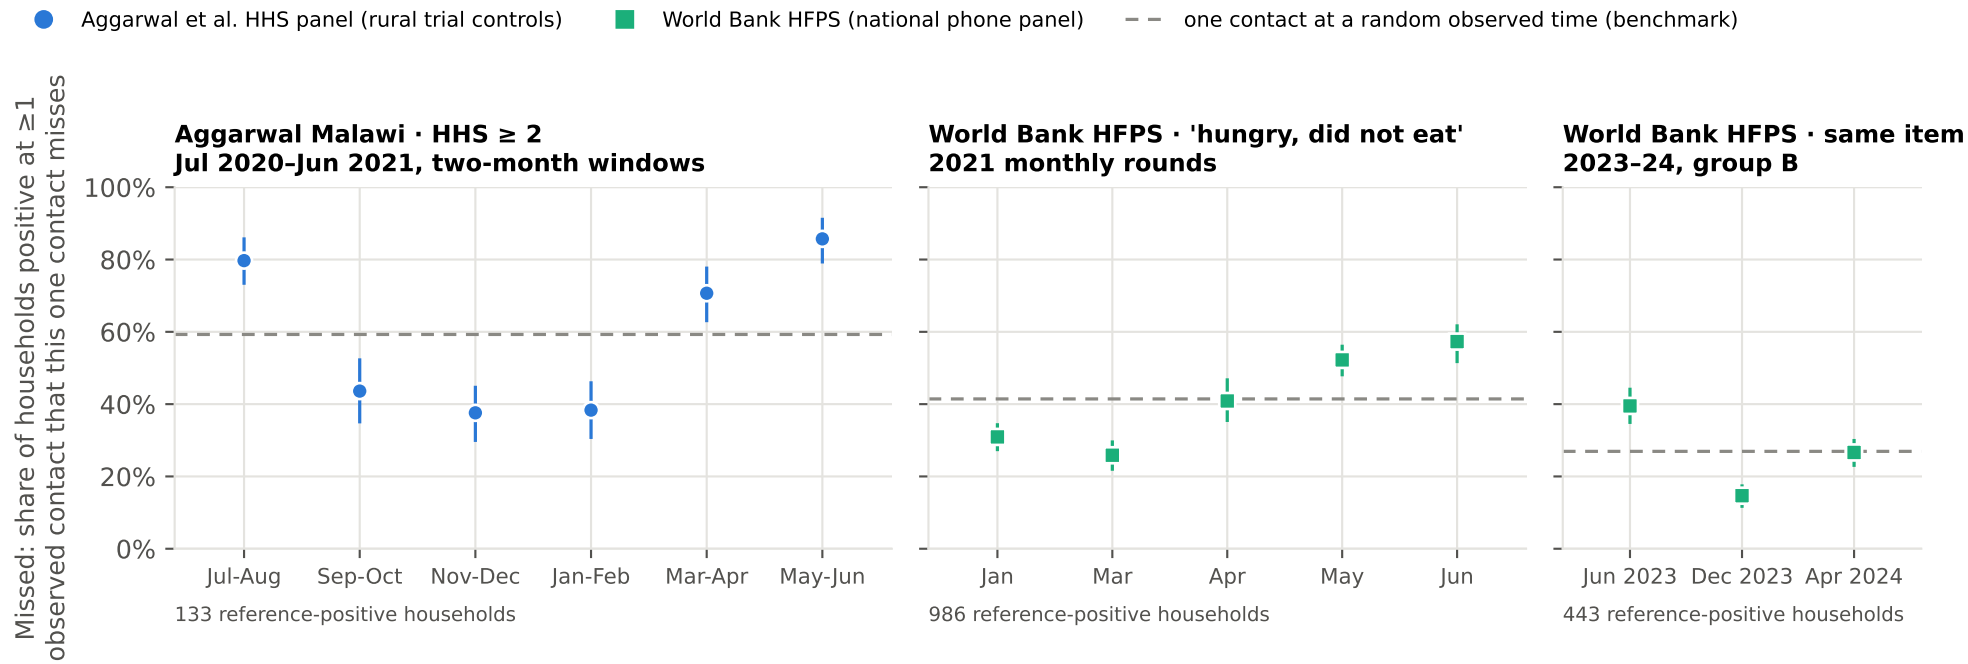
A single lean-season contact misses fewer households than a random or post-harvest contact, in two Malawi panels



Dots: missed share in households observed at every contact of the horizon; whiskers: 95% cluster-bootstrap intervals (villages for Aggarwal; districts for the World Bank panel, a coarse approximation). The two datasets use different questions (HHS ≥ 2 vs one FIES item, both 30-day recall) and are not pooled.